ART OF ARCHITECTURE

Continuity without compromise 92

Bennington College's trim new library by Pietro Belluschi suggests that modern architecture can fit comfortably into a traditional New England setting.

Citizenship in building 98

The headquarters Architect Albert Kahn designed for the National Bank of Detroit serves as a visual link between midtown and the river front.

Flying fir for a fair 102

Seven wooden shells form a display pavilion for Oregon forest products.

Squaw Valley's Olympic tent 104

At the focal point of California's winter Olympics scene is a $3-million "big top," engineered to span 300 feet despite the Sierra's heavy snows.

Alvar Aalto—Finn without borders 116

From the Helsinki office of one of Finland's great cultural heroes a characteristic brand of humanism is being exported to the world.

Medical center for Free Berlin 132

A milestone in health care, produced by German-American cooperation.

CITIES

Mount Clemens' boot-strap renewal 124

For six years, this small town has pushed a program of reform and renewal. Now the results are showing up in a series of visible building projects.

Mount Clemens fresh-start housing 127

In contrast to the tired clichés of the typical public housing program, this project pioneers good design and a scattered site policy.

BUSINESS OF BUILDING

Building's soaring statistics 107

A portfolio of charts tracing the growing importance of construction in the U.S. economy and the expanding volume of building activity of all kinds.

Building in the sixties: a $670-billion boom 113

During the next decade construction expenditures will exceed the total of the past 35 years, including the booming late twenties—a FORUM forecast.

TECHNOLOGY

Nervi's methodology 138

The grace of Rome's giant Sports Palace evolves from sophisticated prefabrication in reinforced concrete and from a master's devotion to simple geometry.
