

The changing suburbs 47

TRANSPORTATION

The new network 50

Transportation is radically changing the character of the suburbs, and the suburbs, in turn, are radically changing the needs in transportation.

WORKING

Industry can be neighborly 57

Factories on the Stanford campus are converting Palo Alto, Calif. from a suburb to a satellite without jeopardizing its garden city goal.

The planned industrial community 63

Don Mills, near Toronto, is both a success and a failure. It is a good place to work and live, but unhappily its workers don't live there.

Does industry pay its way? 67

Sometimes, but industry's biggest benefit to a suburb is tax flexibility.

LIVING

Serenity amid chaos 71

Just off the center of Houston, River Oaks is a suburb that survived the city.

Freeway suburb 75

The scatteration, built-in decay, and brand-new ugliness of Irving, Tex. are warnings to all new suburbs growing compulsively along the highways.

A dream defended 80

In the nick of time the exurbanites of Westport, Conn. are mustering to protect the amenities which attracted them to the country in the first place.

SHOPPING

The battle for business 85

Fountain Square in the heart of Evanston, Ill. has developed a rounded program to recapture trade from the newer shopping centers on the fringe.

Free parking for 5,000 88

The plague of most suburbs, automobiles and parking lots, is converted into the stock-in-trade of shoppingwise Garden City, Long Island.

BUILDINGS

Architecture for the suburbs 90

Buildings of all kinds are being made neighborly by savvy design and siting.

Town houses in the country 97

A land-saving substitute for the typical subdivision: clustered dwellings.

WHY THE SUBURBS?

What is their compelling attraction? 100

The growing suburbs are mostly for growing children—a gallery of photographs.
