

K 3909947
D 3909940

Qbra
Per 213

- 88 Campus beat . . . and offbeat
TAC's new Brandeis buildings play on a rhythmic theme.
- 94 Can investors afford architecture?
A New York realtor says no; FORUM suggests they can, and must.
- 98 The low cost of elegance
Craig Ellwood builds with fine detail—and economy.
- 104 Technology: Four great pours
New experiments in concrete:
Morandi builds a huge pavilion for Italy's automobiles.
Saarenen slings an air-borne roof for Washington's planes.
Candela arches thin-shell parabolic vaults for Mexico's Bacardi Rum.
Nervi raises giant columns for Turin's labor exhibit hall.
- 116 Gallery: Architecture of the Dogon
African villages tell a dramatic parable of communal life.
- 122 Toward richer city streets
Author Jane Jacobs suggests how to humanize the urban grid.
- 126 College Gothic in modern dress
From four campuses, four examples of a growing trend.
- 132 New break for apartment owners
A business-of-building expert explains the "condominium" co-op.
- 134 Rebuilding:
A fine Manhattan town house becomes a handsome office building.
A British town shows how to turn blight into beauty.
Roundup: half-year statistics—rebuilding still going up.

DEPARTMENTS

- |     |               |        |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
|-----|---------------|--------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 5   | News          | Cover: | Roof structure of Turin's automobile exhibit hall (see page 104).                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| 53  | Projects      | 16     | Editorial, subscription, and advertising data.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| 59  | Products      | 198    | Advertising index.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 85  | Editorials    |        | Published monthly by TIME INC., Time and Life Building, Rockefeller Center, New York 20, N. Y. This issue is published in a national and western edition. Additional pages of western edition numbered or allowed for as follows: W-1—W-2. Entered as second-class matter at New York, N. Y. and at additional mailing offices. Subscription price $6.50 a year © 1961 TIME INC. All rights reserved. Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations and The Associated Business Publications. |
| 142 | Abroad        |        |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| 149 | Books         |        |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| 153 | Letters       |        |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| 202 | Editor's note |        |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |

Publisher's note

Important changes are being made in the way FORUM looks and operates.

This page, for example. The table of contents has been redesigned to make room for a monthly report like this from the publisher's office. It will take readers behind the scenes with the 29 members of FORUM's editorial staff to see the activities which back up FORUM's pages.

On the masthead—on page 85—appear much more important changes. It reveals that Joseph C. Hazen Jr. has been promoted to associate publisher, an office to which he brings the benefits of long experience in journalism and building. Hazen joined FORUM as an associate editor two years after his graduation from Princeton's architectural school in 1935 and has been FORUM's managing editor since 1950.

The masthead also reveals that the new managing editor is Peter Blake, who moved up into this position on July 1 after 11 years as an associate editor. Trained in architecture at the University of Pennsylvania and Pratt Institute, Blake became a registered architect in 1957 and has practiced notable architecture ever since. Concurrently he has distinguished himself in many related fields: as curator of architecture for New York City's Museum of Modern Art, as a contributor to Harpers, Harpers Bazaar, Saturday Review of Literature, and The New York Times, as the author of numerous books (most recent: The Master Builders), as visiting critic to the schools of architecture at Cornell, Yale, and Pratt, as designer of architecture exhibits for the State Department at the recent fairs in Moscow and Berlin, and, of course, as a prolific writer for FORUM. Henceforth, Blake will devote all of his time and talent to FORUM.

On the last page of the magazine another important change appears. There Editor Douglas Haskell, dean of U.S. architectural editors, will bring to readers each month his salty observations on the state of architecture and building, by-products of his frequent reconnaissance trips for FORUM through the U.S. and abroad. (Incidentally, two of Haskell's recent trips were made for higher purposes: to Oberlin at commencement time to receive an honorary Doctorate of Fine Arts, and to London in July to be honored—along with AIA President Philip Will—by the Brazilian government at the Congress of the International Union of Architects.)

In future columns, more about FORUM's editorial staff.
—R.D.P. Jr.