This month

This month AD begins a new series of articles, entitled 'Briefing', in which different categories of buildings and organisational forms are discussed by specialists in each particular field. The first feature, by Clifford Barnett and Peter Sargent of the Leisure Research Unit, is concerned with various aspects of leisure.

The International Symposium on Pneumatic Structures was held in Delft last September for aficionados of blow-up buildings and air supported structures. The symposium is reported for us by Graham Stevens who stirred a rather dull conference to life by injecting politics into the over-technically oriented proceedings.

The report on squatting in Zambia puts forward proposals for regularising the organisation of squatting in order to retain the best aspects of the lifestyle while improving the quality of services and accommodation.

The Archigram Catalogue is an illustrated list of the group's last ten years' work. Reprints of these pages will be distributed when the show visits the ICA in London, before going on to Berlin, Stockholm, Haarlem, Hanover and Dusseldorf.

A new Product Guide will start in Catalogue in which Alexander Pike will select, within a different category each month, products on the UK market, and will point out their distinguishing characteristics. He begins with windows.
