

CONTENTS

Cover

Flexible housing visualised by Trevor Sutton

681 Summaries/French

683 Cosmorama

Space form manipulation. Ant Farm exhibition. Image technology. On Site. Shooting plastic. Polluted algae. Roof top oasis. Vec transport system.

686 Shadrach Woods

Shadrach Woods, one of the partners Candilis, Josic, Woods, died last summer. Peter Smithson pays tribute to him.

689 Books

692 Danish collective housing

A group of 150 families in Denmark are forming a collective so that individuals can live, work and act together as a community. Their ideas and plans are discussed by Nigel Merryweather and Steve Rayner.

695 Galleria

Jonathan King and William Cannady's photo-crit of Houston's new Galleria shopping and office centre.

698 Flexible (?) housing

Andrew Rabeneck and his firm, Building Systems Design Ltd., perceive a conflict arising in British housing. On the one hand, the code of standards is becoming increasingly constrictive; on the other, the life-styles of the occupants are getting more and more expansive. In response to the 'tight-fit functionalism' of minimum standards, there are now proposals for flexibility or multi-use of restricted space. People are then able to plan and personalise their own dwellings.

712 Briefing: Laboratories

Professor John Musgrove posits that the distinctive feature of laboratories is that they are more extensively equipped with services than other buildings, and are thus able to accommodate a wider range of activities. Solutions fall into two main groups according to whether the servicing is run horizontally or vertically.

728 Sector: User needs or exploiter needs

Maureen Taylor is concerned for architects' social philosophy. Should they justify an elitist position or adopt an advocacy role? Should they find out what people really want, or should they leave design decisions to the citizen?

734 Pick of the Projects 1974

Third announcement of AD's successor to Project Awards.

736 Round up

Housing. Buildings. Planning. Transport. Work. Art.

742 Check list

Alexander Pike's subject this month is window furniture.

742 Letters

743 Catalogue

746 Summaries/German

Next month

Martin Pawley returns to the subject of garbage housing.