207 Indigenous building in the Third World

Allan Cain, Farroukh Afshar and John Norton argue the feasibility of a policy of indigenous building for non-industrial countries, and they present case studies of the suitability of indigenous built form to the climate and resources of a particular area.

225 Docklands feedback

An innovative scheme for a large area of Bermondsey's disused riverfront, by Theo Crosby (Pentagram), Alison and Peter Smithson, Richard and Margaret Finch, and John Shaw (Trevor Danatt Associates).

238 Directory of Alternative Technology Part 2

In AD 11/74 we published Part 1 of Peter Harper's Directory of Alternative Technology. Part 2 deals with 'shelter' and 'energy'. Part 3, next month, concludes the Directory.

243 Living dreams

Jan Wampler has sought out and documented the many fantastic self-built houses in the USA, inexpensively constructed by ordinary people from whatever materials they could find. Built intuitively and unselfconsciously, the houses are statements about the lives of the people who built them.

245 On neighbourhood government

Dr. Milton Kotler points to the advantages of replacing city government by neighbourhood self-government, and he cites some successful examples in Washington.

247 Planning

BRAG case study 11: result of the inquiry. More planning law: Dobry. Development on railway land.

251 Round-up
