

Contents

Cover

Trevor Sutton illustrates French New Towns (page 534)

521 Letters. Books

524 Originators

AD interviews with people who have generated new ideas of particular relevance to the built environment. This month John Turner is interviewed by Barbara Goldstein.

527 Housing by people. From the bottom up, or from the top down?

The first of seven essays by John F. Charlewood Turner intended as a contribution to the clarification of the issues of housing and human settlement, and to the solution of restated problems in ways that reach down to their economic, social and institutional roots. This first essay raises the central issue of locally-controlled versus centrally-administered housing – the choice between autonomy and heteronomy.

534 French New Towns

The French approach to the planning of their nine new towns is dynamic. Only ten years after the first plans were published, construction is well advanced. The new towns are also intended to act as seed-beds for innovations in planning and architecture. Adrian Chobotaru surveys some of the 1100 new towns which have been designated in the USSR since 1917.

561 Telford: British new town with a past

Martin Spring reports

563 Soviet new towns

Adrian Chobotaru surveys some of the 1100 new towns which have been designated in the USSR since 1917.

565 Planning

London's Docklands again. EDRA conference.

566 Housing

The third arm? By Tom Woolley

567 Adaptable housing by Georges Maurios

Discussed by Andrew Rabeneck

571 Aligator farm

Jan Bienkowsky's Odyssey through the London sewers, to rebirth.

574 Round up

Death of giants (Robert Matthew and C. Doxiadis). RIBA and Concrete awards to Powell & Moya. Villa Moderna, Japan. Living mountains. Frozen space. Kids' fountain. Cuban prefab schools. Rhyll leisure centre.

577 Arts

The artist as an explorer of landscape.

579 The freedom machine

Andrew Rabeneck discusses the ideas of the Cybernetician Stafford Beer as expounded in two recent books