

Architectural Design Vol XLVI 3/1976

Contents

Cover

'Volte face' visualised by Adrian George.

132 Letters.

133 Books

137 VOLTE-FACE

138 Housing redevelopment to rehabilitation

John Maule McKean reports on the volte-face in British housing, taking a close look at Glasgow and its community-based ASSIST programme.

142 Explicitness to ambiguity

Richard McCormac talks about changing attitudes towards architectural meaning.

144 Covent Garden: grand planning to muddling along

Tony MacIntyre traces the planning developments over the last decade in the central London area of Covent Garden.

149 The clean an/aesthetic

Colm Mullam looks at the change in a conceptual view of the world that had its roots in the industrial revolution.

154 Hyper-tech to bio-tech

A fairy tale about the six wise giants from Archigram, by Warren Chalk.

156 Professional representation

Louis Hellman reports on the evolution of bodies representing the interests of architects in Britain.

160 Hi-Tech to appropriate

A review of Foster Associates' approach to appropriate technology with illustrations from Birkin Haward.

162 Self-fulfilling prophets

Andrew Rabeneck discusses the apparent about-turn in building development as a function of central government.

166 Professional backlash

Henry Moss points to recent trends in architects' latest work that show a powerful backlash against the liberalism of the early seventies.

170 Housing by people

'Practice of housing': the seventh of nine essays by John F.C. Turner.

174 Conservation: the new myth and the old reality

176 Paperboard building.

Hong Lee and John Gibson survey building with paperboard and feature their own prototype for prefabricated paperboard shelter.

180 Housing.

A handbook on housing co-operatives reviewed by Hugo Hinsley.

181 Round Up.

Letter from London

More monuments: from Russia.

Changing hats: A modern department store in Germany.

James Stirling: A few more items from the master's collected relics.

182 Arts.

Jasia Reichardt looks at the photography of Klaus Rinke.

192 Recently in AD.

Calendar - competitions, conferences, and exhibitions.