BUILDING TYPES STUDY®492

65 Engineering for Architecture . . . an introduction

66 Nine examples of effective architect-engineer collaboration

This year's collection shows architects and engineers in the forefront with new concepts, new systems and new materials.

92 For every problem there's a problem solver

Margaret Gaskie writes about the wide diversity of special consultants.

98 Options in design and cost with engineered systems

Examples from the practice of Gensert Peller Mancini—built around giving architects design and cost alternatives.

104 Innovation

11 approaches to new kinds of problems the architect and his consultants are facing, from solar energy to subway stations to movable stadiums.

116 Round Table: The technical backup for architecture

Where is the expertise? How do we get it out? And how does it get paid for?

122 Task | Ambient Lighting

An idea whose time has come, but whose implications need to be better understood.
