The formidable new U.S. Embassy in Lima, Peru.

Continuing Education

This month, "Merging Virtual Technologies Change the Rules of Collaboration" (page 46) is eligible for AIA/ARCHITECTURAL RECORD Continuing Education learning credits. See page 133 for instructions.

Washington State History Museum 70
Tacoma, Washington

A collaboration between a famous firm in Texas and local architects, the museum is helping revitalize downtown Tacoma.
Moore/Andersson Architects

United States Embassy Chancery Building 78
Lima, Peru

Longer than a football field and built like a bunker, Lima's embassy is a prime example of the changing U.S. attitude toward foreign service buildings.
Arquitectonica, Architect

Tokyo Church of Christ 88
Tokyo, Japan

The site, a small plot near a major thoroughfare, made designing this reverential building a challenge.
Maki and Associates, Architect

Exxon Service Station 94
Lake Buena Vista, Florida

Working within restrictions imposed by the Disney Development Corporation and Exxon, the architects develop a service station like no other.
Hardy Holzman Pfeiffer Associates, Architect
Orlando Alonso Architects, Architect of Record

BUILDING TYPES STUDY 742/Hotels

"Hotels are Back, But..." 98

According to F.W. Dodge, hotels are the fastest growing construction category in the U.S. So where's the work for architects?

Hyatt Regency Hotel 99
Fukuoka, Japan

Michael Graves, Architect
Fukuoka Jisho Company, Maeda Corp., Associate Architects
