Cover: Thirty years ago, dredges descended on Florida's Oklawaha River in a plan to convert it to a straight-sided barge canal. Happily, the plan was killed. Now the corridor has become the Cross-Florida Greenway State Recreation and Conservation Area. Photo by James Valentine.

Printed on recycled paper. Printed in USA. Landscape Architecture, the international magazine of landscape design, planning and management, invites the widest expression of opinion and observation. Opinions expressed editorially and by contributors are not necessarily those of the American Society of Landscape Architects.
