Education

1988, Diploma in Comparative law, Faculté Internationale de Droit Comparé, Strasbourg (France).

1991 Law degree cum laude (Laurea in Giurisprudenza), Faculty of Law, University of Trento (thesis entirely published, Rivista di diritto civile).

Academic work experiences, University of Trento, Faculty of Law

2001, Temporary assistant professor, Private comparative law.

2005, Assistant professor, Private comparative law.

2014, Associate professor, Private comparative Law.

2016, Full Professor, Private comparative Law.

Field of research

My research mainly focuses on comparative law and methodology, embracing both theoretical and applied research. In particular, I concentrate on the use and implementation of some of the methods of comparative law in contemporary contexts, with the primary aim of producing knowledge and a better understanding of these normative legal environments. Secondly, a more oriented applicative research aims at favoring the development of contexts having a natural tendency to entropy.

An area of these studies specifically deals with the interpretation of EU law, with particular attention to the EU legal language. Here comparative law, combined with the methods of other sciences (linguistics e.g.), is at the basis of an interdisciplinary proposal of de-codification and consolidation of EU autonomous concepts, favoring an effective harmonization and understanding of EU law.
